When things go wrong

We use consequences according to what needs to be done to help the child to learn to behave differently and put things right.

The consequence is logical and natural – if you drop litter, you pick it up; if you are rude you apologise; if you don't do the work, you catch up, if you hurt someone, you repair the relationship.

Consequences for minor things are dealt with in the moment and then we move on

Restorative Practice in school

We use a restorative approach in school which aims to help people take responsibility for their actions and repair harm and damage caused in a situation. We use the following questions

- What happened?
- How were you feeling?
- What were you thinking?
- Who else has been affected by this?
- What do you need?
- What needs to happen now, so it can be repaired?
